This report has been compiled by the office of Data Systems and Development Services and the Office of Information Services. Thanks is given in particular to Jim Pehrkon and Neil Hurley who were responsible for the technical computer aspects of the project, and additionally to the following staff members who worked long hours to implement the computer system in time to produce this first report:

Supervisors: Barbara Bunton, Marianne DuBois and Bob Hites; Staff: Brenton Burkholder, Steve Dienstfrey, Walter Foley, Barbara Johnson, Ron Krouse, Marjorie Londregan, John O'Brien, Robert Pease, Mark Sheetz, Caroline Street, Debra Weyforth, James Wilson, and to Kent Bank's Data Services staff, especially Nancy Morretta, for processing the data.

The analysis section of the report was designed and edited by Ann L. Irvine with graphics by Linda Lang. Computer Services were provided under contract by Interactive Sciences Corporation, Braintree, Mass.

FEC DISCLOSURE SERIES

No. 1: Presidential Pre-Nomination Receipts and Expenditures, 1976 Campaign

This first report in the FEC Disclosure Series covers Presidential receipts and expenditures for the period January 1, 1975 through August 30, 1976, which were reported to the FEC by September 15, 1976. The report includes all financial activity reported by Presidential candidates, their principal campaign committees, other authorized committees, and individuals who have spent money independently but on behalf of a candidate. The report also lists the names of those political committees which have registered support of a candidate, but their dollar figures will appear in a later report. The microfilm location of each document is also noted.

The analysis section at the beginning of the report focuses on the money involved in the 1976 Presidential Campaign, and summarizes the financial activity of several of those candidates. Individual summary dollar figures are given for each of the major candidates, including independents who may not have had a primary campaign. The general election funds for candidates Ford and Carter have not been included but are listed in footnotes.

The figures in this report are total figures as reported by the candidates and their committees. They should be regarded as indicators of the total flow of money in a campaign, not necessarily as a net campaign cost. Adjustments have not been made for transfers between candidates and committees, among committees, loans and loan repayments, unsettled campaign debts, or verification by FEC audit. These figures are only those reported for specific covering periods on the proper summary pages.

Also planned for release are reports on the financial activity of multi-candidate special interest groups, and of contributors to the Presidential campaigns. Reports on Congressional campaigns and Presidential general election financing will follow during 1977.

FEC DISCLOSURE SYSTEM

Under the Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments, all candidates, committees and individuals involved in financing a Federal campaign are required to disclose their financial activity on a monthly or quarterly basis, and the Federal Election Commission is required to make these reports available to the public. As a first step the public has direct access to all reports within 48 hours of receipt, either at FEC headquarters or by mail request. Both paper and microfilm copies are available for review or purchase. In addition, the FEC is required to publish a variety of indexes and reports which consolidate and cross reference the data.

The enormous volume of these documents has raised a question of how to make the data readily accessible to the public, and how to consolidate and summarize the data so that it can be of maximum use. For the 1976 campaign, 2,500 Federal candidates and 7,500 political committees are expected to file 100,000 documents representing over a million pages. On the individual level, five Presidential candidates have already filed over 3,000 pages of documentation on their own campaign to meet their disclosure requirements.

In order to handle this volume of documents and to make these indexes and reports available in a timely fashion, the FEC has designed and is implementing a new computer system, which will store information from the documents, and allow for rapid consolidation and analysis of data. The computer will make it possible to develop a summary picture of the financing of each candidate's campaign; the activity of special interest groups in support of specific Federal candidates; contributors, with total contributions to specific candidates and committees; and independent expenditures by individuals and committees on behalf of candidates. Most importantly this information can reach the public quickly.

The various indexes consolidating this data will be made available in two forms. First, each index will be updated on a daily basis and available in the form of a computer printout in the Office of Public Records at the FEC. Second, each index will be incorporated in a published report for distribution to the public. Each published report will include a printed copy of an index and a summary analysis of the data and will be available in printed or microfilm form. This report is the first in the FEC Disclosure Series, based on the indexes generated by the FEC computer system.

The Commission hopes this FEC Disclosure Series will be of benefit to the general public as well as researchers on the political process. These reports should make it possible to readily select, analyze and draw conclusions about the vast amount of data now becoming available on the financing of Federal elections.

FEC COMPUTER SYSTEM

The computer system being used by the Federal Election Commission has both on-line data entry and on-line inquiry capability, plus a high speed printer to handle the great volume of reports. The system was developed by the FEC in contract with Interactive Sciences Corporation, in Braintree, Massachusetts; the equipment is a DEC PDP-10 provided by the Digital Equipment Corporation, in Maynard, Massachusetts. The computer itself is located in Braintree, and data is transmitted by high speed telephone lines between Washington, D.C. and Massachusetts. The equipment at FEC headquarters includes ten (CRT) data entry video display units for entering data. These are staffed by two shifts of data entry clerks working day and night. The data base in the computer in Massachusetts is then updated every night. Transmittal back to Washington comes in to a high speed printer capable of printing 600 lines per minute, which will regularly provide consolidated up-dated printouts of the computer data. In addition, there are two inquiry terminals which allow for selective inquiry of particular information. One of these terminals is located in the Public Records Office at FEC headquarters and is available for public use.

The computer office has a permanent staff of 18 with an additional 24 temporary employees hired to implement the program in time for the peak general election period. In addition to the data entry staff, the office includes a team to identify documents when they arrive, to assign identification numbers, and ensure that committees and candidates are correctly grouped. A third group is concerned with verification of the data in the computer indexes.
